The Christmas Bash Hash...bah humbug! I should have known a hash around this time would be a humbug, but I was dragged there by the ghost of Christmas past to see the few hashers who dare to show up for the last run of the year.

I was dragged up and down some tormenting hills some of which really got my heart pumping this is what it was about I had forgotten, again I was taken up, Down, up, down felt like a roller coaster. Finally we were getting somewhere I saw the slippery rocks my buddy warned me I would see only there was no river, it was at this time I felt the worst was yet to come.

The ghost of Christmas present soon presented itself as I was almost face to face with the said slippery rocks, I tried to get through this dangerous terrain, only the ghost of Christmas present won't let me or any other hasher for that matter as we were all unable to find the right trail, up and down the river we trekked but to no avail the ghost even got help from a serious hare that refused to show the way, so we walked up and down until someone called on on from the same direction we were previously warned about the big bad x, somehow by the time I got there, I did not see the x, but there was the ghost helper who insisted we get ourselves out this web we weaved, Luckily for me I saw the writing on the ground on in, with relief I ran as fast as I can to get away from any more hauntings.

I finally got back to where I started this tormented journey thinking to myself I made it I am alive, only to be whipped up by the ghost of Christmas to come, this was the scariest of all as I witnessed down-downs with water instead of beer.....no,no,no I swear I will be good just bring back beer, I love Christmas hashing with good friends and plenty beers, no!!!!

Thanks Committee members for a lovely hash bash run and Jim for a fantastic after hash lime....Merry Christmas to all and to all a good Hash.

Colin's Contrivance

Some blamed the humidity; others their lack of fitness; maybe it was the hills; but hashers were huffing and puffing all over this run, right from the very start! Tremendous work by the committee members in providing a decent course, packed with some no-nonsense portions. Those walkers must have been laughing at the rest of the pack.

Well run aside, we all got into some serious liming, with a taste of some Christmas goodies. Beer and music were flowing just nicely. A lovely site provided for just the right atmosphere. But wait, maybe that was not enough! Everyone who was left continued the after party poolside and were treated to some sumptuous fare and more beer, cocktails and the sort. We partied way up to the midnight hour.

Special thanks to the hares for the great run and Big Jim & family for allowing us undesirables to guest at his party. A fitting end to a great hash day and a good start to the hashing year. Thanks to all!
