Pythagoras of Samos lived 570B.C a great teacher and mathematician and old personal friend of mine. His theorem if I remember correctly went something like this: The square of the err, hypotenuse err err, is equal to the er sum of the, umm err err. Square of an equal four sided triangle. That sounds about right doesn't it?

The point I am trying to make is that a sound classical education would have benefitted the chief Hare Zam, in his efforts to run from point A to point B without confusion. You see running from point A to B is more difficult than you think, when one considers the ordinary brain of the Hasher (Mahashma being an exception of course) a run in a straight line open country like Couva would have been preferable.

This run was more like $A^2 + B^2 = C^2$. C being a point on both sides of Knolly's Tunnel, a quantum mechanics value unknown to the hares. The bar man made a guess but guessed the wrong space-time co-ordinates and had to pack up the bar and move. This gave him a grumpy disposition for the rest of the evening.

The run started late thanks to Dr. Mike and after the usual checks we made a long and perhaps unnecessary loop back to the start. Then, into a never ending dry riverbed and I mean never ending. Eventually Mr. Colin told some 30 odd runners to get to point B (or C as it turned out) by the road since it was too late to go through the forest. It turned out to be a long track on the road, no short cut.

At point C the down downs was cut short because drivers had to get back to their cars and there was no pooffer this time around.

The bus ride

I was not on the bus myself but I have been reliably told the average age of passengers was near 70. The bus looked like an excursion from Sunnydale retirement home. This is not to say that they were not young at heart. Indeed all week they were overdosing with geriatric tonics. One old biddy kidnapped Michelle, who was last seen jumping off the bus shouting, "has anyone seen my husband?". I was also reliably informed there was wild winning and gyrating by some old Geasers like Hash Cash (yes the Doc himself) and Bernard. Even body surfing went on. What a day it was. ON ON...The Organ

HM's Happenstance

To sum it up - 'The change was worthwhile'; the site of 'historical importance'. Logistical challenges aside, kudos to all those who completed the entire tunnel run. Quite a lot goes into putting on an A-B run of this nature, and planning and input from committee members is key.

A note on fitness: the hash run always varies, depending on location and conditions. It is imperative that the hasher/ visitor/ newbie be aware of their specific level of fitness before attempting what could turn out to be a grueling trek. If unaware, have a chat with one of the hares, a senior hasher, or someone familiar with the area/ terrain.

On On

Segregate your waste at the hash! Remember Disassemble, Crush & Dispose responsibly. We're all in this together!
