Well it was one of those run where getting to the run site may have seemed like forever, especially for those hashers who only know up to the light house (P.O.S.). For me who live in the east it was not difficult, because I am used to the area and the drive. A fellow hasher (C) had a real hot one and drove a further seven miles to find a toilet at big yard just to relieve himself, it's a good thing he was early enough to do his thing and get back on time, otherwise he would not have hesitated to do it in the sea or bush, as he always says any port for a storm.

The run after a short briefing from one of the hares, started on the usual "ON ON" road, then one or two false trails, before heading into the bush, you could hear waves bashing against rocks, so you know you were close to the sea. At one point we came across an open area...what a fantastic view, I said to myself, the same thought expressed by fellow hashers. Once you are a nature lover you would have to stop, forget hashing for a few minutes and take in the view, the sea breeze and the surroundings, but it was short lived as all you keep hearing behind you is "ON ON", "ARE YOU" and "CHECKING" and you have to stop day dreaming (probably thinking about how can I find or get to this spot again and who can I bring here to fish or maybe hmmm, food for thought.)

Anyway back to the run, after leaving the hilly and rocky sea shore, we headed inland where it got a bit tough, especially for the virgin and second to third hashers. I was behind one of them and was pushing (literally) and urging on this individual. Wow! She had what it takes to keep a man going, ass like that, she kept me going while I kept her going, she have what it takes to be a good hasher (determination) she didn't give up, even after she suspected that her toe nail was torn "I didn't know how that happened". After telling her that we are on the last hill we nearly reach, about seven times, she didn't give up. The hills really seemed endless at times. Sockeye for the front runners, "pressure" for the new and not so new hashers.

We finally got back to the road and it was a nice short ON IN for a change. Time to catch your breath, drink some beers, change (some of us) and wait for the down down. The down downs was called and a few or should I say many female virgins much to the delight of the men, there were one or two males, which we did not care to hear or know about. Then there was the clown who forgot to give or send the directions or information for the next run, he got what he deserved pvc pipe and of course beer. The poofa nominee went to a guy who got stuck in mud in the height of dry season, a 4ft square area of some mud to be exact, he also lost a side of his sneaker. The poofter by popular demand was won by the guy who forgot to bring his sneaker and borrowed a girl's, because no male sneakers could fit him.

The after lime was great, a spin off from the last run, who was there would know what I am speaking about, anyway the key posse did it again, Bar B Que like that from baby pork ribs, wings, steak, all of which Marley tasted even before the dam thing could really done cook, licking his fingers and giving instructions on how to cook, saying he is an iron chef "things a little bit plenty also make people do and say". It was the usual shit talk and Homie was the victim, you know people still talking how a little baby snake fat like meh baby finger, make him do the moon walk in Aripo on a recce, and someone swear they saw what looked like reverse lights, when he attempted to get out of the way of the baby snake. I heard he is somebody guard, Homie boy ah sorry but what happen with you the spider and the leaf take the cake " people feel free to ask Gerry or Fireman about that"

OH I almost forgot to mention we saw a leather back turtle on the beach, just down the hill from where we were, a first time for some. The turtle was huge, but the dam thing turn around and head back to sea upon seeing Gerry, don't ask me why.

HM's Hyperfunction

As like most on this run today, I had to stop and revel in the breathtaking view at one point on the run. Perfectly untouched that portion of the north-east coastline. Lots of varying terrain on the run; from dry sharp rocks, 1-foot high seaweed, hiking up a lush hillside, and some WWII memorabilia for good measure. A full length hash!. Well done by the hares in manipulating the site & setting the run. I believe those who made the trek up to Balandra were more than contented by the evening's activity. One for the books I say. On On
