TARP Card carrying senior hashers should never be asked to write the trash. It's hard enough trying to remember what you need to do next, far less trying to remember murky week old events.

So it was the Tetron run or Tetrun, as the camouflaged hares named it. Pickups were planned beginning at 2:45pm with the last pickup at 3:45pm. I arrived JIT (that's just in time for those of you not into jargon) as usual at 2:44:59pm, only to be told to wait as the first bus had not yet arrived. The evidence of this was plain to see by the massive restless crowd awaiting transport, and about to jostle City Gate style onto the first maxi that then arrived. Anyway we were all transported to the run site while being instructed as to where we could and could not go. These restrictions also obviously applied to the Hares as the run had to be planned and set in quite a restricted area similar to the last time we hashed in Tetron many moons ago.

Having said that we did get a good work-out with some hashers actually managing to get lost and having to crawl up mountains and down valleys before finally fumbling their way back to base camp. This bunch of lost souls I am reliably informed contained at least four very seasoned hashers. Obviously for the next hash rather than an army barracks, we need to go to a kinder garden playground.

The run left the Corporal's Recreation Club headed basically along the coast (either north or west or in that general direction, by which I mean I don't have a clue), deviating for a false trail into the bush, then out again passing Scotland Bay which was garbage strewn and extremely sad to see. Then up onto a path heading north(?), east(?) who gives a shit anyway. All this while listening to a crowd party boat parked in Scotland bay with the music blaring and winer guys not quite sure what to make of us. We even had an invitation from the DJ on the boat for runners over x years to come join them. I did not see any takers and why should there be? We were having far more fun watching a snake devour an agouti, or was it a rat, or a manicou? Depends on who gave the story. Anyway that was the most photographed snake in Trinidad, although I did not see anyone taking a selfie with Manny themakko-well.

That trail ended at an arrow pointing in the direction from which we runners came, a technique invented for Monday runs by N. Boos and R Wyver which met with very little favour at the time, although it was greeted with much less derision on this Saturday run.

So on back it was. Basically the same path we came on, with a few different views along the way and a few alterations to add some variety.

Surprisingly the run did offer a pretty good work out with many jaded hashers returning to the start. Jaded of course does not include the many fit young guns of both genders who now seem to relish runs the way we relish cold beer.

The immediate after hash was to the sea with beer for many hashers which is now standard operating procedure for runs by the sea. We also did have the 'luxury' of showers which meant cleaner hashers to enjoy Marwan's food and take the down downs, with the usual gatherings of small groups spread around the area, swigging cold beer and pontificating on all the usual after hash topics, until it was time to leave with a more orderly but watchful line of travellers for the bus ride out. All in all not a bad way to spend a Saturday afternoon.

HM's Herpetology

The study of hashers is probably not unlike the study of reptiles – behavior that is usually easily predictable – except for the odd specimen and/or occasion. Hashers followed instructions to the letter; no doubt not relishing the prospect of missing out on an unusually situated hash such as this one. A well thought out & executed hash was put on by the hares – we thank them for the afternoon proceedings. As an aside, I was able to study the rumination of a large reptile's meal, from the relative safety of someone's mobile-phone screen! Go figure!. On On

Committee Cumming & Going

Jordan Scheer has decided to bugger off to another small island with a little more sun, sand & sea. Diane Henderson has asked to be excused due to other pressing professional responsibilities. We thank them both for their service to the hash committee and wish them all the best. We have asked Michelle Girod to come in and provide some service to the committee. We welcome her once again.

Enviro-Corner - Foam food & beverage containers

As a hash would like to work towards the complete restriction of polystyrene foam food & beverage containers. Polystyrene foam is a major component of plastic debris in the ocean. Discarded polystyrene does not biodegrade for hundreds of years. Restricting the use of foamed polystyrene takeout food packaging is a priority of many solid waste environmental organizations. Let's educate & encourage our service providers accordingly.

Segregate your waste at the hash! Remember Disassemble, Crush & Dispose Responsibly. Reduce | Reuse | Recycle | We're all in this together!
