It was a very hot and sunny day at Rousillac. As we approached the run site, there were a few hashers already there waiting to set off. Upon waiting for the run to set off a bus filled with hashers singing and playing music arrived; now is time for the run to begin. It was about 3:50pm and the sun was still blazing. We set off ON ON to the streets - I am running and realize but wait we still on the streets?? I wanna know where's the bush and hills?? I wasn't expecting hills but really 45 mins and still no bush! We bounce check points and well these are the longest checks I came across, but never the less, I am there trying to keep up with the crowd.

We entered into a residential area with a lot of cross roads giving the hares the advantage of having many false trails, which makes it more challenging but hey I like it that way. There were so many checks that Devon and Nigel decided who should check next and how many they'd each already checked. Halfway into the run the majority of the hashers were confused or lost for a moment due to the invisibility of paper...but thanks to Nigel and Devon for their true hashing spirit for setting us back on track.

Then finally we entered into mother-nature. It was the best part of the run heading through greenery. While running I heard music, getting closer then I realized it's a beer stop and hashers drinking and dancing. Seeing that beer stop was like water in a desert! That beer was the most refreshing, I drank it "down down down down down" there was no cause to wait " lol" soca playing hashers enjoying themselves it was like a little pre-party.

As I left the beer stop continuing about 5 minutes into the bushes I came across a huge open field. It was the most magnificent sight I have ever seen - beautiful green grass, a huge mass of land I could see hashers from a mile away. Thumbs up to the hares for that marvelous scenery, it was a long run through the field though, seeing animals grazing it was a beauty.

After that long run through the field, or should I say walk, finding myself in the middle of the park from being in the front, but due to the long X's and checks I just didn't have it in me. Upon reaching the end of the pasture I could see the football field ahead, it sort of brought some relief to me knowing that I am almost there.

On reaching back to the run site I needed another cold beer; the run took approximately 1 hour and 45minutes. On tasting the roti it was good and the beers cold. So later on in the evening we were welcomed with the wonderful sound of tassa. Well from that point the hashers crowded around to embrace the music. We were dancing and having a great time - it was a night filled with enjoyment and fun. And that wasn't all - there was even an exotic indian dance. She was the center of attention. The night was young and we were all in a good place. The DJ was also keeping the vibes with his music. To sum it all up - great run and wonderful entertainment so as we decide to depart, the bacchanal wasn't over because the bus was taking the lime to a bar. So hashers ON ON to the next run.

HM's Hinderance

Another Central Posse Hash run – and they did not disappoint. This crew pulls out all the stops to make sure we hashers ingest a hearty and well spent evening. There was a mini-fete at the beer stop, DJ music, roti, tassa and exotic dancer. What more could you throw in for a fantastic hash Saturday. After a punishing run devoid of the least canopy of vegetation – the after activities were a fitting climax. There was even the big-bus in attendance – no doubt the bus goes having a whale of a time on their journey to & fro the deep Southland.

Thanks to David and Sharon and the rest of the crew for an afternoon well spent. We look forward once again to your outlay come 2015.
