Well finally I was going to a hash 'Down De Islands' because I had heard the last one was so good. So I waited with anticipation! Up early on Saturday, pelau cooked, cooler packed and I am off to Pier 1, where we were supposed to meet for 8 am. People are still arriving and we are gathered by the pier....waiting, waiting, waiting, why are we waiting oh why why why...Eventually we all boarded and found a spot. Good music playing, drinks pouring and as usual Pat the winer boy dancing to his heart's content. Nine forty five and we are still waiting in the hot blazing sun. And no one can tell me why...Finally we understood, when a group of about 10 people now come strolling unto the pier. Finally at 10:15 we are off...

On a boat ride that should have taken roughly 45 minutes took 2 hours because de driver of de boat decided to give us a scenic ride but without scene...lol. We finally docked on Chacachacare and had MORE waiting to do while the hares set the Hash. By this time we were hungry but didn't want to eat too soon before de run. Finally the hares have come back and its ON ON!!

The trail started on the coastline and then it was ON UP! I should have guessed that this run would have been mostly hill! Any way ON UP and Up and UP, passing though some abandoned houses through a field of mother in law's tongue/snake plant We eventually got to a flat area where we saw some large eggs on the ground that somebody said was corbeau. I just cover my head and run faster cause I don't want no mother corbeau attack me for her children...We got to a little valley, well that what I called it...only to see the walkers going up a mighty hill!! Yes a mighty hill, all you can see is up, well if it have to be so then is so...and listen eh, if you cyah make with speed move to de side and let people pass PLEASE!! When we reached the top de hare don't know where to go! He talking on he walkie talkie and being told to go right, one saying go back down and people confused about where to go- up, down, left, right..finally Mumtaz took us on to the right path which was not certain because there was no paper!

Continuing along and more rain, making the terrain hard to manouver, with people slipping and sliding and one girl falling flat on her face, poor ting...well all that in it, it is a hash after all, anything possible. Well we finally got to the ON IN and everybody went straight to the water to cool off. We did not stay long on the island as the same boat captain who take long to reach say we have to leave 4:00! Why? Some say the weather, others say he had another engagement...who knows...the ON IN party on de boat was nice for ther 45 minutes it took to reach back. Which we continued in KFC's car park after! ON ON to the Christmas party at Blackjack Marine.

And so began the quest to extract and bestow pleasure from a run off the mainland at Chacachacare. For what we do, its 900 acres provide an ample technical challenge. Throw in the change in weather we experienced this Saturday evening, and the best efforts of any hares can be easily overwhelmed. We accomplished our objective; Our over-subscribed mission was entirely not FUBAR. In fact in spite of the logistical impediments, 'we' 100 hashers nevertheless had a whale of a time. A Conga line on the C Prowler – indicative of hashers knowing how to have a good time under any circumstances.

We would like to sincerely thank all those who made it out for this venture. It was a most memorable hash in many ways. Thanks to those who gave assistance with the logistics and heavy-lifting – without your help we would not have been able to accomplish.

On On to your 2015...
